CRIPPEN, SULLEN AND SILENT, WILL NOT TALK IN HIS CELL.

Is Confined in Dungeon Usually Reserved for Political Prisoners for Safe Keeping.

BELIEVES LENEVE INNOCENT

Suspicious Bottle, Probably Containing Poison, Found on the Doctor When Arrested—Miss Leneve Threw Crippen's Revolver Overboard.

United Press Telegram.

QUEBEC, Aug. 1.—Dr. Harry H. Crippen and Miss Ethel Clare Leneve, apprehended on board the liner Montezuma following a picturesque chase by wireless, were taken from the vessel before daylight today and placed in the underground dungeons beneath the Parliament building, a place usually reserved for political prisoners. The authorities were unwilling to trust them in ordinary cells.

Dr. Crippen, supposed to have killed his wife, who was Belle Leneve, the actress, is sullen and silent. He sat motionless upon the edge of his bunk and refused to talk. He snarled short replies at the questions of the newspaper men who were admitted but declined to give them any information whatever.

The girl is a physical wreck. She has not slept a wink since she was arrested. She now rails and tosses on the iron bed in her cell. Her sobs have affected even the hardened guards.

The suicide precautions against Crippen and his typist were well advised. Among Crippen's belongings were found a small paper, wrapped in a dry bit of dark brown liquid. No analysis has yet been made of this but Inspector Dew is convinced both are poison.

After Crippen was arrested on board the Montezuma, Leneve rushed to the port of her stateroom and threw something overboard. This is believed to have been Crippen's revolver. Inspector Dew found her sitting in her stateroom after Crippen's arrest. She was reading a novel, Dew reported and then entered. An arrowed she shrieked and staggered to her bunk. When she revived, she was searched. It is found she wore a heavy canvas harness, designed to catch her fire. While the stewardess was searching her she held her hands aloft, mouthing, "She went over and again collapsed. The ship's doctor was called. She is now very weak.

While searching Crippen Inspector Dew found a linen bag next to the skin. It contained several diamond rings and earrings with stick pin attached.

Inspector Dew believes Miss Leneve is innocent of any participation in the killing. He declared the girl's disguise aroused the first suspicion. She is small and well built and her attire could not conceal her delicate outlines.

Third Officer Mowat of the Montezuma today claimed credit for first arousing Captain Kendall's suspicions regarding the pair. He gathered together all the newspapers available and, with Kendall and the other officers, reviewed the story and decided the pair to be the missing couple. Other officers refused any further discussion of the case believing they might be called as witnesses.

Many passengers believed the woman was not a boy but did not suspect "he" was the missing typist.

Crippen was arraigned in police court before Judge James Rogers today. He admitted his identity and did not object to returning to England. He was remanded to jail for 15 days.

Miss Leneve was too ill to appear. Physicians announce that she has broken down and is in a state of nervous collapse.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—It is reported today that Scotland Yard has discovered new evidence that the mutilated body found in the basement was that of Crippen's wife. It is declared this evidence will strengthen the prosecution. Arrangements are being made for a speedy trial for Crippen. Miss Leneve's parents expressed relief that their daughter was found.

Berlin on Main Line of B. & O.

Somerset Rumor

Special to The Courier.

BERLIN, Pa., Aug. 1.—Latest railroad rumors coming from presumably good authority are to the effect that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company is now considering an old survey made by former Chief Engineer Stewart and said to be the best route over land over the Allegheny mountains to the present main line in the vicinity of Garrett and comes up through the Buffalo valley to Berlin, passing west of town through the John O. Ream and J. M. Moore farms, crossing the Plank Road this side of the Charles Flanger home to the northern part of the borough and then on up through Brookersville and Stonycreek townships to the old Downey tunnel, thence to Mt. Dallas and to Hancock, Md., where it again joins the main line.

Exhaustive surveys have been made south of Maryland to get a line over the mountains, but it is said that nothing nearly so good as the old route could be obtained. "The third track on either side of Sand Patch tunnel, together with other work intended for temporary relief, have been abandoned. The operation of the third track already cut down being tied in to serve as switches and side tracks.

Officials Not Telling the Route Into This Place

Division Engineer C. L. Palmer of the Connellsville & State Line railroad is back from Baltimore where he conferred with the higher officials of the road regarding the building of the line in this section.

Engineer Palmer stated that if any decision regarding the exact route by which the road will enter Connellsville it was not given to him. This route has not yet been announced and it is not known whether the officials have fully decided upon it.

It is stated that the route finally decided upon will follow the river into Connellsville, but as three surveys have been made of this general plan it is not yet known which will be chosen.

A Polish Miner Is Murdered By His Countrymen at Calumet.

Special to The Courier.

CALUMET, Aug. 1.—John Hinda, a Polish miner aged 35 years, having a wife and three children in Poland, was found dead, Sunday morning, in the public road in front of a negro's house in the central part of Calumet. Two foreigners, Andy Laczek and Peter Mosek, were taken to the county jail at Greensburg by County Detective Woly M. Don in time to partake of their Sunday evening meal. They are the parties who are suspected of doing the killing. The heaviest part of the crime seems to hang upon the shoulders of Andy and Peter, who were brought along as one who is perhaps deeply implicated with the killing.

The body of Hinda was found at the side of the road early Sunday morning by persons in the vicinity and when persons of some prominence in the town came to the scene they called on Coroner H. A. McMur-ray of Youngwood.

From the appearance of the murdered man, it is apparent that a violent struggle had taken place by the for-

Typhoid Does Not Gain; Diphtheria Case is Reported

No new cases of typhoid fever have been reported in the district covered by Health Officer Allen Hyatt since last week and it is believed that if the proper precautions are observed there is no danger of the disease spreading.

Besides the five cases within the borough there are several victims of the disease in Connellsville and Bullock townships. Health Officer Hyatt is today working on his monthly report to the State Health Department. A case of diphtheria was reported yesterday in the home of John Burke, South Prospect street. Rascally Burke, aged 6, is the victim. The house has been quarantined.

IT MEETS WITH MUCH FAVOR

Location is Far Superior to Present Location of the Paid Department and Increased Rent is Offset by Other Advantages.

That the South Pittsburgh street building now used for a garage would make a splendid location for the fire department is being urged upon the members of Town Council. This building is to be vacated within the next few weeks when the new garage owned by Work & Clark in East Apple street is ready for occupancy. Fire Chief Mitchell said today that the present garage would make an ideal home for the fire wagon.

As it will probably be impossible for the borough to build a fire house within the next several years it is argued that a better location should be secured for the fire fighting apparatus. In the present location there is a constant menace by the Pennsylvania railroad that speeds by on the locally owned tracks. A freight train, passing the fire house, requiring a long detour. The present location is also also for the fire house in the Pinnacle district.

With the fire wagon located in South Pittsburgh street it would be in easy reach of all parts of town and would have the advantage of a better haul. For fires on the Pinnacle it is necessary to go by way of Fairview avenue in order to escape the hard pull up either Main or Fayette street hills.

For fires on the West side or in the business district of town, the wagon would be as near in South Pittsburgh street as in its present location. Fire Chief Mitchell also calls attention to the fact that in the present building, in winter, there is always danger of the chemicals freezing. The building is hard to heat in winter and leaks when it rains.

The matter has been taken up with several Councilmen, most of whom apparently favored the proposition. Mitchell claims the difference in rent would be more than offset by the more desirable location of the building, the saving of fuel and elimination of danger of having the chemicals freezing during the winter and being made useless.

Moving Day for West Penn Men; Two are at It

Chief Engineer J. L. Fritsch of the West Penn is moving today from South Prospect street to the new residence he has erected in East Cedar avenue.

The new home has been completed some days past but Mr. Fritsch decided he would not move until all traces of the construction work had been obliterated.

While Mr. Fritsch was engaged in problems more serious than any encountered in the West Penn's engineering department that of getting the yards properly heated and equipped without the total destruction of their burdens, former Superintendent of Transportation J. W. Brown was at work in Vine street over the same problem. Mr. Brown is today directing the moving of his household effects to Wheaton, Ill., his new home.

Widow's Right to Share Estate Again Comes Up

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, Aug. 1.—The question of a widow's rights were brought up again, this morning, before Judge J. C. Work in Orphan's Court. The case was that of Mrs. Josephine Mele, of Connellsville. Her husband was Carl O. Mele, he having died February 10, 1909, in Connellsville. The couple who were both about 55 years of age, were married in the month of June, last year, and lived together for about four months, when she was forced to desert her husband on the grounds of cruel treatment. At the December term of court, Mrs. Mele appeared against her husband and he was convicted of desertion and non-support and ordered to pay her $3.00 a week. At his death he left a small estate in Connellsville township, and the petition presented this morning by Attorney John Dugan, ask for reasons why the administrator, R. S. Pierce, should not set aside the widow's $300 exemption. Sterling, Higbee and Matthews for the administrator, contend that she is not entitled to this amount as she was not living with her husband.

Will of the Late Joseph R. Stauffer Is Filed for Probate at Uniontown.

An estate valued at $1,000,000 is will to the children of the late Joseph R. Stauffer, millionaire resident of Scotland, who died recently at his home in Upper Tyrone township. The will was probated in Uniontown Saturday afternoon. However, since the property, except $2,000, is will to the children, they decided to create a trust estate so that the interests might be kept together. The deed of trust was recorded at the same time the will was probated.

The will of the millionaire consisting of three typewritten pages, the decedent having signed his name at the bottom of each page. The instrument was written November 12, 1897. At that time Mr. Stauffer regarded Scotland, Western Highland county, as his residence. Since then, however, he resided in Upper Tyrone and made his home there at the time of his death.

With the exception of $3,000 in cash bequests, the entire estate was given to the five children. The decedent gave $1,000 to each of three sisters, Anna Dixon, Elizabeth Ridgour and Sarah Bleher. The will empowered the executors to take charge of his interest in the Scotland Bank and operate it for the estate. They were also directed to conduct the affairs of the Scotland Iron & Steel Company so long as they saw fit to do so. Similar instructions were given the executors regarding the home farm and the Home Farm coke works. In each case the will directed that the proceeds go to the children in equal shares.

After the will was made, however, the deceased sold his interest in the Scotland Iron & Steel Company and became sole proprietor of the Scotland bank, as well as acquiring extensive interests in other institutions in Western Pennsylvania. These changes caused the children to make a deed of trust to the executors. The estate is now jointly known as the John R. Stauffer trust estate.

The children are John M. Stauffer, Mrs. Eva Brown, Mrs. Fannie Reher, Walter F. Stauffer and De-Road Stauffer. All will share equally in the profits derived from the trust estate. The three sons are executors.

SOCIETY.

Trouble Securing License.
 After experiencing great difficulties in securing a marriage license owing to their age, William F. Burnett and Miss Mary Craig, both of Connelville, were quietly married Saturday in Uniontown by Rev. J. B. Black, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. Miss Craig is a niece of Col. Thomas S. Craig, candidate for Congress, and is one of the most popular young ladies of Connelville.
 The ceremony was delayed for 48 hours in order to satisfy the requirements of the law. The first plans of the young couple were to be married on last Thursday. They came to Uniontown early Thursday morning. Being only 17 years of age the consent of their parents was necessary. They brought only the verbal consent. The license could not be issued. They then made a flying trip to Connelville to secure the consent of their parents. Burnett's father was not at home and the law requires the consent of the father. On presenting their papers at the recorder's office they were again disappointed. Saturday they returned with the necessary papers.
A Piano Recital.
 Miss Maude Jennings gave a piano recital on last Thursday afternoon at her home in South Prospect street for her pupils and a number of her friends. The program was rendered with very pleasing to the parents and friends and these who rendered selections acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner. Those who participated in the program were Mary Spiker, Lorena Haas, Fannie Wilson, Ruth Dutton, Mary Wertheimer, Bertha Shaw, Charles Davis, Margaret Guthrie and Grace Workman.

PROTECTION IN THEORY AND IN PRACTICE.

Insurance is not riotous in Fayette county. The Republicans have too much hard-headed horse sense to wander after strange gods. The Republican police have been good enough for them, and they should be good enough for every Pennsylvanian in fact they should be good enough for every citizen of the United States, though it may be more difficult for the citizens of some other States to understand why the American principle of Protection is profitable for rural as well as manufacturing communities.

Without the Republican tariff policy the wheels of Pennsylvania industry would be motionless, its stocks smokeless, its forges silent, the hum of its prosperity hushed. It is difficult to understand how any Pennsylvanian can subscribe to the doctrine of Free Trade, or tariff-for-revenue-only. We have had a taste of both, and the taste was most bitter.

It was not much sweeter to the country at large. In spite of the specious arguments of Democratic fanatics, the prosperity of this great nation depends upon its crops and its manufactured products. A nation is like an individual. If it produces more than it consumes, and can sell its surplus to a needy neighbor, its prosperity is insatiable. If its crops fail and its industries are crippled, its resources are sensibly diminished and in the same ratio is its prosperity curtailed and there is always the possibility that the curtailment will amount to a positive loss. When the income is less than the outgo, poverty and distress prevail; when the receipts are greater than the expenditures, prosperity reigns. Even Micawber, who didn't always follow his own advice, evolved this philosophy.

We, therefore, have little patience with upstart reformers who would in the name of virtue overturn the wisdom of experience. No party organization is perfect, but party principles which have been tested and found worthy should not be lightly set aside because a few disappointed ambitious find room to criticize the application of those principles on the ground that it is not perfect.

The people who are looking for perfection around here are on the wrong level. While the art of aviation is being developed, we are still a wingless people, and by that much at least removed from the angels.

FIRE DEPARTMENTS AND FIRE INSURANCE.

The value of an efficient fire department is illustrated in the fact that the fire losses of Conneltsville were less than $500 in the past five months. Any one of the numerous inflammable outbreaks in this period might have cost the community thousands of dollars but for the prompt and capable work of the Conneltsville fire department.

There is no cheaper fire insurance than a first-class fire department, especially in Conneltsville where the water supply is abundant and the pressure is sufficient to throw water over any ordinary building in any portion of the town, and to throw it in sufficient quantities to flood any ordinary conflagration within a very brief period.

Conneltsville has had some serious differences of opinion with the fire insurance interests on the question of insurance rates. There has been a disposition to hold up insurance rates for the alleged reason that the fire department was not properly equipped and its efficiency was not up to date. This fact emphasizes the importance of constructing and maintaining a strong fire department, and in this work there should be no stinting of necessary expenses, and no mercy shown to incompetent or indifferent firemen. If there is any department of municipal government worthy of civil service regulations it is the fire department.

These observations are not intended as a reflection upon the Conneltsville fire department, which fortunately for Conneltsville has as a rule been faithful and effective; but it is not incapable of still further improvement, and discipline is necessary to the proper maintenance of the potentiality.

AN APPEAL FOR THE SWIMMING HOLE.

To say nothing of the glorious methods of the Old Swimmin' Hole of boyhood days, every boy and girl, and every man and woman, should know how to swim. It is an important part of their education. Yet the percentage of people who cannot swim is getting greater every year, because the opportunities for learning are getting more limited.

There is only one way to remedy this situation and that is by providing a swimming pool at public expense and entrusting them with instructors. Even the small boy, who learns how to swim with almost as much facility as any other young animal, is in danger of missing this part of his training because he has no water to swim in.

The Mount Pleasant water people have forbidden the boys of that hill town to bathe in the creek above the reservoir on the very reasonable ground that water for domestic purposes should not be the dealings of a bathing pool; but the Mount Pleasant authorities at very small expense might provide a swimming pool in an other locality. While located on the river, McKeesport has provided for boys with such a pool furnished with filtered water, and it is one of the most popular institutions of the city.

The Park and Playgrounds Committee of the Chamber of Commerce of Conneltsville have something of this kind in view for the Conneltsville boys, but it has not materialized yet. We will hope that it and the band stand will get in together on the home stretch.

SCOTTSVILLE'S TYPHOID CONTAMINATION.

The typhoid fever situation in Scottsville grows worse instead of better, and the charge is now made that it is due to the pollution of Indian creek water by several cases of fever along its banks the excrement from which was allowed to drain into the stream instead of being treated in a sanitary manner.

It is to be true it is a matter, as we have hitherto observed, of lively interest to Conneltsville. While we do not draw our water supply from Indian creek, some of its waters find their way into the Youghiogheny river whence a large portion of our supply is drawn. To be sure, it is filtered, but that is not a positive guarantee against possible pollution.

Some of the most deadly typhoid epidemics have arisen from just such causes. There ought to be a stringent law against the criminal carelessness which produces such wholesale sickness and slaughter.

In the meantime, however, the Conneltsville health authorities should keep a vigilant eye on our water supply. The comparatively trifling expense of a filtration should not stand in the way of the people's protection. At an average cost of $500 per patient, typhoid fever is not only dangerous but expensive.

THE NEW CHAIRMAN AND THE REPUBLICAN DUTY.

The new Republican County Chairman is young in years but not in experience, and he will have the benefit of wise counsel. What he needs particularly, however, is the confidence and cooperation of the Republican workers of the county, and this he will undoubtedly receive judging from the harmonious and enthusiastic action of the Republican County Committee on Saturday.

Fayette county Republicans have the very excellent habit of fighting out their factional differences within the party, where they should always be confined, and employing all their energies in fighting the common enemy at the general election.

The campaign this fall will be an important one from a party point of view, and every loyal Republican owes it to himself to stand steadfast for the whole Republican ticket, which now represents principles rather than men.

John F. O'Rourke, a New York engineer, has a new plan for building the battleship Maine from the mud of Havana harbor. His plan is based on a system of pneumatic caissons surrounding the wreck. When these are in position Mr. O'Rourke claims that the Maine can be swung in a cradle of powerful cables and lifted clear from the bottom of the harbor. She then can be repaired as readily as if she were in drydock and as soon as the repairs are completed can leave Havana under her own steam.

BEGIN CRUSADE ON THE PEDDLERS.

Number of Them at Mt.
Pleasant Have Been Prosecuted.

THEY HAD NO LICENSE

Mad Dog Causes Scare on the Fox
Farm Near Mt. Pleasant—A Ban
Has Been Placed on Swimming Hole
Near Bridgeport Dams.

Special to The Courier.
MT. PLEASANT, Pa., August 1.—After a persistent crusade lasting for two weeks, Constable James Ellis and State Officer J. H. Thompson, both of town, have succeeded in rounding up a score of produce dealers who have for the past year been selling produce and fruit from a wagon without a county license. The crusade in that short time has netted the county $100, which offenders have paid.

During the summer months dozens of produce dealers, mostly Assyrians, peddle produce in wagons both in town and through the coke region. A license of $25 is required to give such dealers legal right to peddle, but as that law has not been enforced in the past, they have grown bold enough to sell under the very eyes of officers of the law without a license. Things became intolerable last Monday a week when an Assyrian dealer from Pittsburg came here and sold potatoes in false measure. His arrest started the crusade which has been and is now being pushed energetically.

Most of the non-licensed peddlers are found selling their goods around the little coke towns. They are asked for their license, and if they cannot produce one they are arrested and given a hearing. The general outcome is that the dealer takes out a license and pays the fine, ranging from $5 to $25, which is imposed. In one day Constables Ellis and Thompson secured over $100. It is the intention of these two officers to continue to carry on their warfare against non-licensed peddlers until the unlawful practice is discontinued. They are also on the lookout for the about weighing of dealer and the use of fraudulent measures.

Mad Dog Scare.
A mad dog on the Fox farm a mile west of town last week caused a great deal of excitement among the residents of the town and of those who lived in that vicinity. The bull dog was large and very vicious looking. It had been chained to a tree on the farm and the close confinement is supposed to have caused the dog to go mad. It bit its own leg until the blood flowed freely from the wounds. It also tore the young sapling which it was tied to until the people on the farm were fearful lest the tree would be broken down and the dog might escape. Officer J. H. Thompson was summoned and he quickly arrived on the scene. A couple well aimed shots put an end to the dog's suffering. The dog and chain were buried while the tree was cut down and burned so as to prevent any spread of the rabies.

On the same day Officer Thompson was called down to Morewood street to kill a vicious dog which had attacked Mrs. Frank Steinhilber, a resident of that street and had bitten her on her left limb. She is in a serious condition. The State quarantine on dogs in this borough will soon run out, and during the remaining days Officer Thompson is killing many stray canines. During the past week he killed over three score of canine scamps to his credit. On Wednesday alone he killed 11 dogs. In town the dog population is nearly extinct, but at the coke works in this vicinity the dogs are to be found in alarming proportions, often averaging two or three to the house.

Ban on Swimming Hole.
Swimming in this creek hole is a pleasure that will be denied the members of this community in the future according to the action recently taken by the Mt. Pleasant Water Company. The swimming pool is located two miles east of town and the water from the pool flows directly into the bridge port dam, and that same water is used by consumers of the water company. Superintendent Gills of the water company sent Constables Jack Thompson and James Ellis together with Deputy M. F. McCully to the pool Sunday. The little place presented an appearance of a fashionable health resort and dozens of youngsters were enjoying a dip in the cool water. No arrests were made, but all of the bathers were informed that the practice must stop. Police officers have been engaged to guard the pool and prosecutions will follow if anyone is caught bathing there.

In Search of Ben.
John Nicetic, a Slavish man of 17 years, was in town Saturday searching for his 12-year-old son whom he says ran away from home two months ago and has not been heard off since. Nicetic thought that the lad may have come to Mt. Pleasant but all efforts to locate him here failed. The boy he said was of a very smart and bold nature and when Nicetic proved too slow for him he left his home and parents and went out into the world. He received a letter from his son shortly after his escape in which the son told him his motive for leaving home. The letter was posted at Truener.

CRIPPEN GLAD CHASE IS ENDED.

Miss Leneve Faints When She is Arrested.

DRAMATIC SCENE ON VESSEL

"I Am Glad the Suspense Is Over," Says Doctor Charged With Murder When Accused by Scotland Yard Struth on Liner Montrose.

On Board S. S. Montrose, below Quebec, Aug. 1.—Dr. Hawley Crippen and Ethel Leneve are in the grasp of Scotland Yard.

Inspector Dew boarded the ship off Father point with the pilot and in a few minutes the handcuffs were on the man for whom the police of the world have been searching for the past three weeks. As for Miss Leneve when arrested she fainted in her cabin still dressed in boy's clothes.

When Dew touched Crippen on the shoulder all the latter said was: "I am glad the suspense is over. The anxiety was too great for me to bear."

Dr. Crippen was taken to his cabin, while Miss Leneve remained in cabin No. 5 in a state of collapse. Miss Leneve was given girl's clothing as soon as the arrest was made.

Arrest Very Dramatic. Inspector Dew boarded the Montrose disguised as a pilot. Crippen was pulling the deck with Sureness Stewart. He was the pilot boat pulled by but four seamen and remarked that there seemed to be a good many pilots in the boat, but he made no attempt to escape. He continued to perambulate for five minutes, after which Crippen felt a tap on his shoulder and turned to face Inspector Dew in uniform.

"I want to see you below a moment," said Dew. Then turning to Chief McCarthy he said, "That's the man."

"I arrest you in the name of the king," said McCarthy. "You are my prisoner. Anything you say will be taken down in writing and may be used against you at your trial."

Passengers and crew knowing for the first time that something out of the ordinary was going on crowded to the front and McCarthy hustled his prisoner not unkindly down below as they were descending the narrow ship's stairs Crippen said:

"Have you a warrant? What is the charge?"

McCarthy produced his authorization for making the arrest given him in Quebec by Judge Rogers.

Crippen grasped the child, could proceed and read the backing, reading "Murder and mutilation," he muttered to himself, "Oh, God."

He threw the warrant on the floor of the passage and continued to his cabin absolutely impassive.

Dr. Stewart, in describing the arrest, said that Crippen had been very nervous since the gulf was reached he did not seem to be apprehensive of the arrest at Father point until he saw the boat of men pulling for the ship. Then he turned pale.

Inspector Dew walked up the deck, and when he got near where Crippen and Dr. Stewart were standing he stopped and beckoned to Crippen. He did not falter for a moment, but walked straight over to where the sleuth from Scotland Yard was standing. Dew took him by the arm and led him to the captain's room under the bridge, where the arrest was made.

Crippen is Seized. Then he was quickly searched. The first search of his outer clothing revealed only a $10 bill, a watch and a pen-knife. No revolver, not even a knife was found. Placed in his undershirt, however, were five ladies' diamond rings and a diamond pin. Miss Leneve, when searched, also had in her possession a ladies' diamond brooch.

Striving in the cabin handcuffed and cuffed, Crippen presented a curious spectacle. There is no doubt that the man has been eating his heart out with apprehension for the past few days, although it is equally sure he felt that the blow would fall at Quebec and not Father point. He sat on the small lounge with his head buried in his manacled hands, huddled back in a corner. Occasionally he would raise his head and glare ineffectively out of his eye.

In his room he kept twisting his hands nervously and during the time the detectives were searching him he looked sheepish like nothing so much as a small boy caught stealing jam. There is nothing of a prepossessing character about the man at all and it seemed almost a travesty to handcuff him. When Dew produced the diamond rings from the undershirt Crippen gave a hard stare.

Miss Leneve was searched after she revived from the collapse which followed her arrest. She was given brandy and Inspector Dew and the stewardess went through her clothing. Nothing was found of any consequence save the diamond brooch and Dew asked her several questions, trying to draw from her what knowledge she had of the crime. She volunteered little information, however.

She was dressed in a brown suit trousers and coat and vest, with a low collar and tie. Her hair was cut short. She is slightly taller than Crippen with grey eyes unusually large.

WORLDWIDE SEARCH FOR DR. CRIPPEN AND TYPIST ENDS IN THEIR ARREST ON STEAMER.

The worldwide search for Dr. H. H. Crippen, supposed to be the slayer of his wife, who was Belle Elmore, an actress, ended when wireless messages from the steamer Montrose were received by the Canadian authorities confirming the report that the alleged murderer and his typist, Ethel Leneve, were aboard the Scottish liner. Yard, England's famous police headquarters, discovered portions of a body buried in quicklime in the cellar of the home of Dr. Crippen in London on July 9 following a report sent out by the husband that his wife had died in Los Angeles, Cal., which report proved false. It was after the finding of the body that the search was commenced for the missing doctor and the girl. Every steamer leaving European ports for several days after the body was found was watched, and, following clues, Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard left Liverpool on the Laurentic, bound for Quebec, which was the first port of call for the Montrose. The latter vessel was overhauled in midocean by the Laurentic and the arrest accomplished by the ship's officers.

and, although she was crying in a frightened sort of way when questioned, it was evident in spite of her decidedly pretty girl. Twice Miss Leneve had to be given brandy to revive her from fainting spells. The boy's clothing was taken away and she was given young women's apparel.

MAY BE TRIED IN 3 WEEKS

English Authorities Mean to Hustle Crippen Case.

London, Aug. 1.—It is suggested that Crippen may claim American citizenship as a means of delaying the course of justice. Scotland Yard officials do not have precise information as to whether Crippen will be deported or extradited but anticipate deportation, in which case it is stated Crippen will be placed on trial within three weeks.

So that there may be no delay the official made arrangements for the prompt dispatch to Quebec of Sergeant Mitchell, should that be necessary.

The Crippen case is looked upon by the police here as one of the most dramatic they have ever handled. Certainly it is many years since the public mind was so stirred by a crime.

HER PARENTS WILL FORGIVE

Mrs. Leneve in London Sends Cable to Daughter.

London, Aug. 1.—Mrs. Leneve has cabled to her daughter Ethel as follows:

"My Darling Daughter—I implore you to tell police everything you know and let nothing count more than the establishing of your innocence. However great may be your affection for your husband, do not, dear, let it be more to you than the duty of yourself, your mother and your brother. He brave, little girl, and have no fear. We are confident of your innocence."

WENDLING DENIES CRIME

Fugitive Wanted in Louisville Caught in San Francisco.

San Francisco, Aug. 1.—The arrest of Joseph Wendling here ends one of the most remarkable pursuits of a criminal in recent years. Wendling, who admits his identity but denies the crime, is wanted for the murder of eight-year-old Alma Kellner of Louisville, Ky., last December.

Two days ago Wendling was seen on the streets here. Chief of Detectives Curney of Louisville and two local detectives scouted the town for him. Finally they located him in a third street lodging house kept by Mrs. Moriarty. She denied he was there, but when threatened with arrest she admitted he was in her house. Wendling was found hiding under a kitchen sink with his coat off and his sleeves rolled up. The tattooed skin on his right forearm quickly told the detectives that they had the right man. The prisoner quietly submitted to arrest and made no protest when handcuffs were snapped on his wrists. He quickly admitted his identity.

and, although she was crying in a frightened sort of way when questioned, it was evident in spite of her decidedly pretty girl. Twice Miss Leneve had to be given brandy to revive her from fainting spells. The boy's clothing was taken away and she was given young women's apparel.

DROWNS CHILDREN.

Demented Mother Makes Way With Four in Awful Manner.

San Francisco, Aug. 1.—The drowning of her four young children by Mrs. Joseph M. Mello, wife of a wealthy rancher living near Brentwood, Contra Costa county, has shocked that community. The woman was evidently deranged in respect to count of her children. She lived in a big farmhouse with her husband and six children, the oldest being Chester, a boy of fourteen.

After writing letters to her relatives telling them she was desperate through loneliness she took her children into the kitchen and deliberately set about killing them. First she strangled little Ramona, four-year-old girl, and then drowned her in a wash tub. Lena, two years old, came next. She strangled the baby from the arms of her boy and killed the child like the others. Then she seized her twin babies, five months old, and plunged them into the tub.

Little Chester, who vainly tried to stop his mother's dreadful work, rushed into the yard and screamed for help. Sheriff Venable happened to be passing in an auto and responded. He tried to restrain the twins, but vainly. Then he took the mother to Martinez and placed her in the county hospital.

The woman insisted on taking photographs of the children and locks of their hair with her. She cried constantly.

"I've lived all alone on the ranch for six long years," Mrs. Mello said. "My husband and I own 500 acres of land, worth $500 an acre. Our wealth meant nothing to me. I was miserable all of the time. I knew no pleasure. I went to no theater. All I did was to work, work, work."

The sheriff is puzzled by the woman's actions. He says she tells too clear a story to be demented, although he thinks she was insane when she killed her children.

Elephantine Kills Woman, Greenville, Pa., Aug. 1.—Mrs. Joseph Tingley is dead at her home in Wayne township from elephantiasis. She weighed 400 pounds.

QUIET AT COLUMBUS.

Militia Has an Easy Time Keeping Order in Ohio City.

Columbus, O., Aug. 1.—Although the cars on all lines of the Columbus Railway and Light company are being operated on regular schedules under strict military protection the strike of the union conductors and motormen is far from settled as it was at the time the men walked out at 4 o'clock Sunday morning, July 31.

Both sides to the controversy are standing pat and the striking public is standing with the strikers by refusing to patronize the cars. Many whose sympathies are not with the union men abstain from riding for fear of coming in contact with bricks, stones or rotten eggs.

The 3,500 state troops have very little difficulty in maintaining order, as the people in general take their presence here in good humor and "move on" when requested to do so.

The mass meeting in the state house grounds was largely attended and passed off without the slightest friction. Business men on High street are becoming desperate. The strike has had the effect of driving trade from the city's main business thoroughfare to the outlying districts. Several High street dealers have threatened to close their stores until the trouble is over.

Senator Charles Dick, major general of the Ohio national guard, is now in charge of the troops, succeeding Brigadier General W. V. Maclean of Toledo, who remained in command until the troops passed from a brigade to a division formation.

NOTE NOT YET RECEIVED

Vatican Awaits Spain's Announcement Breaking Off Relations.

Rome, Aug. 1.—Officials at the Vatican have given assurances that the note of Prime Minister Canalejas of Spain to the effect that the Spanish government had decided to break negotiations with the Vatican had not been received. Neither had any intimation been received of the recall of Marquis de Ojeda, Spanish minister to the Vatican.

It was pointed out that the communication of the Spanish note to the press before it reached the holy see proved the inefficiency of the Canalejas diplomacy. Marquis de Ojeda is still here, but is ready to leave at any moment.

HENRY MILLER BRUISED

Painfully Injured in Auto Accident. One Rib is Broken.

Stamford, Conn., Aug. 1.—Henry Miller, the actor, lies in bed in a plaster cast in a country home in North Stamford, one of his ribs being broken and his body covered with bruises. These injuries he received in a motor accident.

Miller was driving an auto over a country road thick with freshly sown seed. The car skidded and hit an obstruction. He was thrown thirty feet against a stone wall.

J. G. CARLISLE FAILS TO RALLY.

Once Powerful Political Factor Goes to His Reward.

WAS LEADER OF DEMOCRACY

John G. Carlisle Was Secretary of Treasury During Cleveland's Administration Before That He Had Served Terms in Congress.

New York, Aug. 1.—John Griffin Carlisle, President Cleveland's secretary of the treasury, who has been ill at the Hotel Volcott since Tuesday last, died last night.

With him at the bedside were his daughter-in-law, Mrs. William K. Carlisle, and his two granddaughters, Mrs. Frederick L. Allen, and Mrs. Louisa Sherman Pittkin, the latter of New Haven.

Mr. Carlisle had slept some Saturday afternoon and again Saturday night. Later in the night his condition grew worse again and he was revived only through the use of oxygen. The patient did not rally well from the attack and continued to grow weaker.

Mr. Carlisle was seriously ill in St. Vincent's hospital last November, but recovered sufficiently to return to his Washington home. He came to New York again about ten days or two weeks ago. His illness was diagnosed as acute indigestion.

Was Power in Politics.

John G. Carlisle had ceased to be a national figure long ago, but for many years of his life he commanded public attention throughout the country by reason of his service at Washington in the house and in the senate, and finally in the cabinet, where he was President Cleveland's secretary of the treasury in Cleveland's second term.

Carlisle was the son of a farmer and was born on Sept. 5, 1835, in Campbell (now Kenton) county, Ky. He went to the common school and studied at home after driving the plow. Then he taught school and at his leisure studied law. He later served in the Kentucky legislature as representative and senator.

His state sent him to the house of representatives in the forty-fifth congress and there for many years he fought side by side with Roger Q. Mills of Texas and William R. Morrison of Illinois, fighting the Republican cause always and the Democrats some times for tariff reform.

In the forty-eighth congress Carlisle ousted Randall as speaker and became speaker of the house. After the death of Senator Beck Kentucky elected Carlisle as his successor in the federal senate. His power was great in the upper branch.

Early in 1896 a movement was started to renominate Carlisle for the Democratic presidential nomination at the next national convention, but he declined to enter the race. He made speeches in that campaign, though, while still secretary of the treasury, and in speaking at Covington, Ky., his old home, he was egged and mobbed by a hostile crowd of Bryanites.

Governor Glasscock Ill. Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 1.—It was announced at the executive office that owing to illness Governor W. E. Glasscock has gone to Huntington for a few days to take treatment. The governor is said to be suffering from nervous strain, due to overwork.

We can do nothing well without joy and a good conscience, which is the ground of joy.—Dibbs.

The Girl and the Bill

By Bannister Merwin

"Oh, no," replied Orme. "I waited for a little while, but concluded that something had called you away. Has Senator Portol recovered from his anxiety?"

"Why, no," said Alcarrante. "But the course of events has changed. He linked his arm in Orme's and walked along with him toward the center of the city. 'You see,' he went on, 'my young friend Portol overestimated the importance of that marked bill. It did give the clue to the hiding place of certain papers which were of great value to him. What he failed to realize was that the papers could be of little importance to others. And yet, so perturbed is he that he has asked me to offer a considerable reward for the recovery of those papers.'"

"Indeed?"

"Yes," Alcarrante sent a glancing glance at Orme. "The sum is ridiculously large, but he insists on offering one thousand dollars."

"Quite a sum," said Orme calmly. He was interested in the minister's instructions.

"As for the events of last night," continued Alcarrante, stopping short, with a significant glance at Orme.

"Well," said Orme indifferently. "I trust that you did not think me absurd for sending that detective to you. That I did so was a result of poor Portol's frantic insistence."

"Indeed?"

"My young friend was so afraid that you would be robbed."

"I was robbed," laughed Orme, trying to make light of the situation.

"Why, how was that?" Alcarrante's surprise was well assumed.

"Oh, after I had good-night to you, the two Japanese caught me while I was going through the tunnel to the courtyard."

"My dear Mr. Orme?"

"They are clever, those Japanese. And afterward you went out again?"

"What makes you think that?" Alcarrante bit his lip. "Why," he stammered, "the detective reported that you were absent when he arrived."

"And therefore," remarked Orme coolly, "he got access to my apartment and, after rummaging through my things, went round asleep in my bedroom, where I found him snoring when I returned."

"The minister swung his cane viciously at a bit of paper that lay on the sidewalk."

"He was not a clever detective," continued Orme. "And as for Portol, don't you think he had better offer his reward to the Japanese?"

"No," replied Alcarrante. "They may have stolen the clue from you."

"They may have stolen the clue from you."

"I have reason to think that the papers were already gone when they went to look for them. Portol is really very anxious."

"Doubtless," added Orme.

"Perhaps," added Alcarrante, after a short wait, "he might even go as high as two thousand."

"Indeed? Then there will surely be many answers to his advertisement."

"Oh, he will not advertise," Alcarrante laughed. "Already he knows where the papers are. While waiting for the clue of the bill, he discovered what others had already availed themselves of."

"That is curious," Orme smiled. "How did he discover that?"

"In a roundabout way. I won't take time for the story."

"They walked along in silence for a little distance. Orme was figuring on an escape, for the minister's clutch on his arm was like that of a drowning man's. Finally he sought the simplest means of getting away. 'I have an engagement,' he said. 'I shall have to leave you, here. Thank you for walking with me thus far.' He disengaged his arm."

"My dear Mr. Orme," said Alcarrante. "Why should we best around the bush?"

"Why, indeed?" said Orme. "Portol knows that his papers are

In your possession. Speaking for him, I offer you five thousand."

"Why do you drag Portol into this?" said Orme. "You know that he has merely been your agent from the start. You think he has bungled, but I tell you, you are the one who bungled, for you picked him to do the work. He had had luck hiring a burglar for you. He lost his head when he ran away with another person's motor car and had to hand the marked bill to country justice. He showed bad judgment when he tried to fool me with a fancy lie. But you are the real bungler, Senator Alcarrante. Any capable diplomat could tell you that."

Alcarrante's yellow face grew white about the lips. His eyes flashed balefully.

"Curse you!" he exclaimed. "You know more than is good for you. Take care!"

Orme laughed in disgust. "Oh, drop this melodrama. I am not afraid of cheap Machiavellism. In this country there are some crimes that are not excused by high office."

"The minister's teeth showed. 'You shall see, my young friend.'"

"Doubtless. But let me tell you one thing; if anything happens to me, my friends will know where to look for the criminal."

Alcarrante snarled. "Don't be too sure."

"If necessary," continued Orme, "a word to certain persons as to the commission for building warships—five hundred thousand, is it not? by the new arrangement—in gold."

Alcarrante, in ungovernable rage, raised his right cane and struck. Orme dodged the blow with his arm, then wrenched the cane away and threw it into the street. A swarm of passers-by gathered about them so quickly that in a moment they were the center of a circle.

"You dunce," said Orme. "Do you want the police?"

"No," muttered Alcarrante, controlling himself with a great effort. "You are right. He darted into the crowd at one side, and Orme, quick to take the hint, disappeared in the opposite direction, crossing the street and jumping into an empty cab which had drawn up in anticipation of a flight.

"To the Roostery," he ordered, naming the first office building that came into his head.

"Sure," said the driver, and away they rattled.

A glance back showed Orme that the crowd was dispersing.

At a distance was Alcarrante. He had seen Orme's escape, and was looking about vainly for another cab. But cabs are not numerous on North Parker street, and Orme, so far as he could tell, was not followed.

When his cab drew up at the busy entrance on La Salle street, he found his way to the nearest public telephone. The hour was close to five and he must discover quickly where he could find the girl. He called up the Peru Marquette. "This is Mr. Orme," he explained to the clerk. "Have there been any calls or messages for me?"

"Yes, sir, Mr. and Mrs. Wallingham called up at 12:30 to know if you were going to Arradale with them."

"The golfing engagement? Orme had not even thought of it since the evening before."

"Anything else?"

"Yes, sir. A Japanese came about one o'clock. He left no name."

"The same man who came last evening?"

"No, sir, an older man."

"The Japanese minister had doubtless gone straight from Arradale's apartment to the Peru Marquette. 'Anything else?' asked Orme."

"There was a phone call for you about 11 o'clock. The party left no name."

"A woman's voice?"

"Yes, sir. She said: 'Tell Mr. Orme that I shall not be able to call him up at noon, but will try to do so as near two o'clock as possible.'"

"Did she call up again at two?"

"Orme understood. In the interval after her attempt to reach him she had learned at Arradale's of his seeming treachery. 'Very well,' he said to the clerk, and hung up the receiver."

But shall he do now? The girl had given him up. He did not know her name or where to find her, and yet he must find her and that within the next few hours. The unquestionably great importance of the papers in his pocket had begun to weigh on him heavily. He was tempted to take them out, there to the telephone booth, and examine them for a clue. The circumstances justified him.

But—he had promised the girl. Stranger than his curiosity, stronger almost than his wish to deliver the papers, was his desire to keep that promise. It may have been foolish, quixotic, but he resolved to continue as he had begun. "At ten o'clock," he said to himself. "If I have not found her, I will look at the papers or so to the police—do whatever is necessary." He did not like to break promises or miss engagements.

There was his engagement with the Wallinghams. It had absolutely gone from his mind. Bessie would forgive him, of course. She was a sensible little woman, and she would know that his failure to appear was due to something unavoidable and important, but Orme's conscience bothered him a little because he had not before settling out that morning, telephoned to her that he might be detained.

Bessie Wallingham? She knew the girl! Why had he not thought of that before?

He got the Wallinghams' number. Were they at home? No, they had gone to Arradale and would probably remain until the late evening train. He hung off.

It remained to try Arradale. After some delay, he got the club house. Mrs. Wallingham? Yes, she had just come in. Would Mr. Orme hold the wire?

Mr. Orme certainly would, and presently he was rewarded for his delay by hearing Bessie's brisk little voice. "Hello!"

"Who?"

"Well, you ought to be ashamed of yourself; we waited over and took the next train."

"Oh, yes, I know all about these very busy people."

"Nonsense! I was fooling, of course. But we were sorry you didn't come."

"What?"

"That girl! Why, what's the matter with you, Robert Orme?"

"Business importance. That won't do, Bob. You'll have to 'fess up.'"

"Do I know such a girl? Are you serious?"

"Why, Bob, I can think of several. Shall I name them?"

"Not give their names! What on earth is the matter with you?"

"Business importance. Is it? Well, let me see. Tall and beautiful, you say. Dark eyes and hair. A black touring car. Hum! I know three girls to whom the description applies. It might be—but you don't wish me to mention the name. Well, you'll have to think of something more distinctive."

Orme thought in vain. The image of the girl was ever in his mind, but he could not, at last, describe her. He had to admit that "The girl I mean lives in one of the suburbs. She has a father who has lately undergone a slight operation. He is, I think, a man who is involved in negotiations with other countries."

"Oh! Where did you meet her? Why, Bob, how interesting! I never thought of her, but she's one of my dearest friends."

"Now, listen, Bessie. It is absolutely necessary that I should reach the house before midnight. You must help me."

He heard her laugh. "Help you? Of course I will."

"Where does she live?"

"Not far from Arradale. Bob, you come right out here. I will see to the rest. It certainly is the funniest coincidence."

"I'll catch the first train."

"There's one at six—for men who come out to dine."

"All right. Expect me. Goodbye."

Orme looked at his watch. He had an hour and a half—which meant that time must be killed. It would be wise to return to the Peru Marquette, for the South Americans and the Japanese might both be on watch for him there. But he did not care to wander about the streets, with the chance of coming face to face with some of his acquaintances. It was obvious that swift and elaborate machinery would be set in motion to catch him. Of course there were many places where he could conceal himself for an hour, but—

Tom Wallingham's office! Why had he not thought of that before? Tom was at Arradale with Bessie, but the clerks would let Orme stay in the reception room until it was time to start for his train. Indeed, Orme remembered that Bixby, the head clerk, had been at the wedding of Tom and Bessie—had in fact taken charge of the arrangements at the church.

Moreover, Tom's office was in this very building—the Roostery. Doubtless it was for this reason that the Roostery had popped into his head when he gave directions to the cab driver on North Parker street.

Hurrying to the elevators, Orme was about to enter the nearest one, when suddenly a hand seized his elbow and pulled him to one side. He turned quickly and saw—Alcarrante.

The minister was breathing rapidly. "It was plain that he had made a quick pursuit, but though his chest heaved and his mouth was partly open, his eyes were curiously steady. 'One minute, Mr. Orme,' he said, forcing his lips to a smile. 'I had hard work to follow you. There was no other cab, but a small boy told me that you directed your driver to the Roostery. Therefore I got on a street car and rode till I found a cab. He said all this in the most casual tone, retaining his hold on Orme's elbow as though his attitude was familiar and friendly. Perhaps he was thus disguising his own adventures merely to gain time, or perhaps he was endeavoring to puzzle Orme."

But Orme was simply annoyed. He knew how dangerous Alcarrante could be. "I am tired of being followed, Senator," he said, disgustedly, frowning his brow.

Alcarrante continued to smile. "That is part of the game," he said. "Then you will find the game serious."

Orme shut his lips together and glanced about for a policeman.

Alcarrante again grasped his elbow. "Do you want publicity?" he asked. "Your principals do not. Publicity will injure us all."

Orme had been given enough light to know that the South American's words were true.

"If it comes to publicity," continued Alcarrante with an ugly grin, "I will have you arrested for stealing a certain important document and offering to sell it to me."

"Rubbish!" laughed Orme. "That would never work at all. Too many persons understand my part in this matter. And then—"

As he noticed the flash of triumph in Alcarrante's eyes, "I could not be arrested for stealing a document which was not in my possession." It was too late; Alcarrante had been able to verify his strong suspicion that Orme had the papers.

Alcarrante smiled. "That would not be publicity," he said. "Publicity or no publicity," he said, "unless this annoyance stops, I will have you arrested."

Alcarrante smiled. "That would not be publicity," he said. "Publicity or no publicity," he said, "unless this annoyance stops, I will have you arrested."

"BACK TO THE FARM"

V.—Social Life in the Country.

By C. V. GREGORY.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

THE social life and amusements of the country are essentially different from those in the city. I have heard people say that there is no such thing as social life in the country, but inquiry disclosed the fact that they never had spent much time in a modern, wide awake farm community. The foundation of all social life is in the home. It is in the country that the home is developed to the highest extent, and it necessarily follows that it is in the country that the strongest basis for a healthy social life exists.

The social life of the so-called "country" people of the city does not exist in the country, and it is a blessing to the country that it does not. Such a social life is unnatural. Social life is primarily for amusement, recreation and development. Where is the amusement or the recreation in the struggle for social recognition by a clique whom a turn of the wheel of fortune has brought up? Where is the development unless it be the development of intellect on the part of the wife and poverty on the part of the husband? Such a society, where people are measured by their money rather than by their true worth, is nobility rather than social life.

Outside the "society" circles the social life of the city consists largely of amusements—Coney Island and its imitations, theaters and public dances. Some of these things are all right in their way. They furnish amusement and recreation. But they do not furnish development.

Here is where the great advantage of country social life comes in. It is not furnished ready-made to those who have the price. Social diversions in the country are made to order. That is the reason why some people do not like them, and that is why a person who once really gets into the spirit of country social life is never afterward satisfied with social affairs in which he cannot have an active part.

The social possibilities of the country are not taken advantage of in all communities. It is true. In too many places each family is content to live by itself, with as little intercourse as possible with the neighbors. It is such communities that contribute most largely to the downward flow of population. With the general waking up of the farming districts is coming a broadening of social life. In some places the local church is the social center, but too often there are some members who consider so harmless a thing as an ice cream supper to be a pay the preacher a sin. As a result, the importance of the church as a social factor is not what it should be.

The most important centers of social life in the country are farmers' organizations of various kinds. Probably the most extensive of these, because the most extensive, is the grange. The grange has been in existence for forty-four years and numbers at present more than 1,000,000 members. In those communities where it has obtained a strong hold it is very effective in bringing the people together. In the older states a grange neighborhood can be told by the looks of the farm and buildings.

The plan of the local grange is to hold meetings at regular intervals, usually once a week in the winter and sometimes as infrequently as once a month in the summer. Generally these meetings are held at the home of one of the members. The whole family be longs. As a rule, there is a literary program in connection with the meeting, where the boys and girls learn to talk in public. Part of the program is devoted to agricultural topics, as one of the objects of the grange is education in farming. There is always enough amusement mixed in, however, to keep the children interested. In the winter the meetings begin in the afternoon, and the men look over the stock and talk over their problems while the children play and the women

"visit."

In addition to the grange, there are many local farmers' clubs that are doing a great deal to bring their members together socially. The only reason that there are not more such organizations is the lack of some one to take the lead. The cities have so long been drawing the best blood from some rural communities that in many places there is precious little left to build upon.

With the changing conditions that are restoring the farm to a leading place in our national life there will be no lack of leaders, and the time will come when every community will have its club or grange.

In the Mississippi valley states, where industrial co-operation has obtained a strong foothold, co-operative societies are one of the principal diversions. These are big affairs, including all the people for miles around. There are speeches and amusements and plenty to eat, and every one goes home happy.

A number of country towns and rural communities have a "field day" once or twice a year, which is in the nature of a big picnic, at which athletic contests predominate.

Local courts of July celebrations give the country boys a chance to work off their patriotism for a week in advance in helping to get things ready, and they enjoy the day a great deal more than they would a ready-made celebration in a big town, where all they could do would be to stand on the sidewalks and shout. The best part of these affairs is that they develop originality and initiative on the part of the young people. It teaches them to develop any latent ability for leadership which they may possess. The boy who can get together the farmer boys on Saturday afternoons and organize them into a ball team that can win from the neighboring township is the one who is going to be able to do things when he gets older. It is no small task to make an effective team out of nine boys when eight of them want to pitch and the other couldn't catch a ball to save his life.

It is the farm boys of today who will be foremost in the agricultural communities of tomorrow. One of the most important of the social factors affecting farm life is a boys' club. Nebraska has a well developed system of boys' and girls' corn clubs. There are a few in Iowa and Illinois, and more are being organized. The members of these clubs each have their plot of corn. They meet around from place to place, get better acquainted with one another and study corn growing. Often an experienced corn grower sends them a letter, gives them some practical lessons. In some cases these clubs are under the supervision of the agricultural college, which sends out letters of instruction to the boys every two weeks or so. In the winter a corn contest is held at the agricultural college. Some of the counties have local contests. These are prizes for the best corn and for the best corn judging. Often the boys who do the best work at the local contests have their expenses paid to the state contest at the agricultural college. Similar contests in cooking and sewing are held for the girls. Work of this kind is an inspiration to the boys and girls. They begin to see some of the real enjoyment of farm life.

This work is being extended to the boys of the cities by means of summer camps, where the boys are taken for a vacation, at the same time getting instruction and object lessons in agriculture. Many a boy who otherwise would have spent his life in town working for somebody else is thus started on the way to become an independent farmer.

Another big factor in rural social life is the country literary society. This reaches more people than a grange or a club can reach. Its disadvantage is that the membership is so large that only a few can appear on the program. But a great many can listen, and they eagerly avail themselves of the opportunity. The country literary society when rightly managed combines both the social and the educational features and is a great uplift to the community.

Along with these other social factors come the local lecture courses. The talent is not always the best, but usually it is surprisingly good. Then there are ice cream suppers, picnics and fishing excursions in the summer and oyster suppers in the winter. The women often have a ladies' aid society, where they can meet and the men assist to their hearts' content. The men have a fraternal order or two, where they can get together on Saturday evening. During the last few years the Y. M. C. A. has been extending to the country, and doing a great deal of good work. Often clubrooms and a gymnasium are established where the neighborhood boys can meet and try their athletic skills. Where such rooms have taken the place of the grocery store as an evening meeting place for the boys and young men there is a noticeable improvement in the community.

During vacations, when the young people are home from school, there is no lack of social diversions that appeal especially to them. There is just as much culture among these modern young people of the country as there is among the same classes in the city and much more whole heartedness. The country dances and parties are well conducted affairs and the occasion of much harmless fun.
